

Dear David,

3/24/92

I suggested to Brown that he submit the manuscript to you (pl) in the belief that unless it is a real dog it is unique from what he told me and should attract much attention and sell very well.

Visualize it as "Oswald Is Innocent" former FBI agent says.

No assassination book title has said this before.

None has had or suggested such authority by its author.

No author has had this appeal to reviewers or talk-show hosts or reporters.

If as I suspect he has had access to only the published official records he is in the role of defense counsel, something Oswald ~~was~~ never had.

That in itself should have some appeal.

You say it is done well. If so I think it is a natural, more so when there is all this interest in the assassination and when most of the books are obvious trash and yet sell well.

This one could even be a good one, in my terms, if he did what he told me he did as well as a former FBI agent should have been able to.

Sorry I was not more alert when you phoned yesterday.

Best,
